

Jeff Miller is Global Head of Food Safety Risk Management for Mars Incorporated, where he is responsible for developing and deploying the Food Safety strategy for the company. His responsibilities include assuring Food Safety capabilities, performance, governance, and technical expertise.

Mr. Miller joined Mars in 2008 as Director of Quality and Food Safety for Mars North American Food business, overseeing the Uncle Ben's and Seeds of Change brands. In 2010, he became Director of Quality and Food Safety for the Mars Global Food segment, and in addition to overseeing the Uncle Ben's and Seeds of Change brands globally, he added the Dolmio, Miracoli, Masterfoods, and Royco brands, (among others), to his responsibilities. He took on his current role at the start of 2014, and has responsibilities across all six Mars business segments, namely Pet, Chocolate, Food, Drinks, Wrigley, and Symbioscience.

Prior to joining Mars, Mr. Miller had numerous managerial roles in Quality and Food Safety for consumer packaged goods companies in the North America. He attended the University of California, Riverside and Irvine campuses, obtaining his Bachelor of Science degree in Biological Sciences from UC Irvine.
