

Sean Leighton is currently Vice President of Quality and Food Safety at Cargill. He has 15 years of experience in quality, food safety, and microbiology management, working in the US, Canada and Europe. Sean has a BS in Bacteriology from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, an MS in Food Science from the University of Minnesota and an MBA from Emory University.

Sean is a member of the editorial board of Food Safety Magazine and is on the management committee for the Journal of Food Safety. In his spare time, Sean enjoys running, lifting weights, and spending time with his wife, Kelly, his 3-year old son Connor, and his 6-month old daughter, Parker.